NSO Group is delighted to work with Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman LLP. We hope, through this partnership, to further enhance the company's activities and efforts to keep the world a safer place through use of our technologies. We are also working with other US law firms in different fields and issues, some of them can be found in our Transparency and Responsibility report.

As for the allegations made in the report - those are recycled claims, filled with inaccuracies and half-truths. The fact is, NSO Group, since implementing its new Compliance and Human Rights policy and misuse investigation procedure, investigates all credible claims of misuse, and takes appropriate action based on the results of its investigations. This includes shutting down a customer's system — a step NSO has taken several times in the past, and will not hesitate to take again if a situation warrants. NSO is proud to be the first in the cyber intelligence industry to issue a Transparency and Responsibility report, and we are engaged with multinational institutions in an effort to bring further transparency to this sector. We look forward to continuing discussions about how to implement governance standards in this industry with organizations who understand the interplay between public safety and security, and the preservation and protection of human rights.
